A great love story, by Sandra Brown, that is combined with mystery and utter betrayal. As the new D.A. of Denver County, Hunter McKee, knows absolutely, without a doubt, his job is about to get even harder. Mesmerized by the vision on his television screen, is the beautiful, Kari Stewart Wynne, reporter for a local station, and Hunter can't help, how he is feeling. First, he is stunned, just by looking at her, his fierce attraction of her, and secondly, he is about to tear her life apart, so suddenly, after her husband's tragic death. Kari was so surprised that the new D. A. wanted to see her? Why? As she is called in and takes a seat, Kari, can't help thinking, how handsome this man is, and so very young, but before long, she will soon detest him. Without purpose and putting it delicately as he can, Hunter tells Kari that her late husband Thomas, along with other councilmen, have been defrauding the government. Outraged, she stormed towards the door, but Hunter caught up with her, and closed the door quietly. He whispered, that a deposition was coming, all charges brought up against the others, and most importantly, if she didn't cooperate, he would subpoena her into court, because he believed, she knew more than what she was saying. Defiantly, she opened the door and left, leaving Hunter there in total silence. Leaning against the door, he realized many things when she first walked into his office and sat down. She was beautiful, of course, but what Hunter didn't prepare himself for, was the worst thing ever in his entire career.....he just fell in love with the enemy. Hunter was true to his word. He subpoenaed Kari to the courtroom, drilled her without mercy, until she fainted in the courtroom.
